CONGRESS GUIDELINES

This is a call addressed to people who work in the artistic, theoretical/critical field and students.

The fundamental objective of the congress is focused on the analysis of the new behaviors of action art, both from practice and from theoretical reflection. People who wish to participate must propose a study that reflects a state of innovation in the theoretical-critical investigation of the language of action art, offering hypotheses that help us anticipate its future.

THEMES

The selected communications proposals must address one of these thematic axes that structure the congress:

1. The theoretical reflection of action art. This section will try to contrast the different theoretical approaches on action art to give them visibility and to be able to build a contextual theoretical framework.

2. The action and its intersections. It is about investigating the hybrid character of action art and observing how this practice has evolved to incorporate visual strategies from video-action or video art; scenic strategies typical of contemporary theater or dance or strategies derived from the field of sound. Likewise, we will pay special attention to the analysis that studies the relationship that action art establishes with the pedagogical field.

3. The possible interactions between action art and the political context. It proposes to investigate how action art, from very different approaches and positions, can cross the limits of established/dominant power to generate an aesthetic discourse beyond antagonisms. Among other approaches, we will pay special attention to the nature of action art from a gender perspective, feminist theory and art, the new masculinity and/or queerness.

4. Action Art Curatorship. It is proposed to investigate the curating of action art from a broad approach that can encompass curatorial experiences that take shape in: individual actions, festivals, cycles in official and/or alternative spaces or the study of public or private collections.

The communications presented to the congress by the selected people must be original and unpublished, in addition to not being pending publication.
